DOCTOR OF EDUCATION SPOTLIGHT: CHRIS BAUMAN

Dr. Chris Bauman, superintendent of Ozark, Missouri, credits his current position to the advanced training he received through Evangel University's doctor of education program. The emphasis on leadership in education is ultimately what led him to enroll. "Other programs only push you toward administration," he said, "but there are teachers who want to be strong leaders too. Anyone who wants to be a leader in their area can benefit greatly from Evangel's program."

For Bauman, the doctoral program challenged him and provided him with new skills, as well as a community with which he could grow and learn.

"Going through a faith-based school brings a dimension of comfort and community," Bauman said. "You are not alone. Through the cohort and the professors, you are pushed to succeed."

Evangel's innovative, practical degrees with a focus on curriculum and technology are designed to take educators' leadership abilities to the next level.

Asked how the program helped him in his career, Bauman summed it up simply:

"Well, to be honest, it helped me get my job!"

FLEXIBILITY OF THE PROGRAM

We understand the reality of busy school teachers and leaders like you, so we created a flexible doctoral program that fits your lifestyle. The program is taught online and allows you to actively participate in online discussions and video conferences, keeping you connected to classmates and professors. Two on-campus seated residencies held in June provide you with the opportunity to meet your professors and classmates in person.

Our cohort model allows you to network with peers and develop meaningful relationships as you pursue advanced administrative and curriculum design leadership skills.

MASTER OF EDUCATIONAL LEADERSHIP SPOTLIGHT:

SARAH YOCUM

Sarah Yocum, a seventh grade English teacher and coach for the Branson, Missouri school district, believes in the unique value of each student that enters her classroom. She also knows that educators must be flexible to adapt to the ever-changing needs of their students and families.

Evangel's practical degree program allowed Yocum to refine her leadership skills while pursuing a flexible fully online learning format that fit her lifestyle and professional career. Through the program, Yocum was able to connect with faculty and advisors whose real-world classroom experience enhanced the program's effectiveness.

This master's program is tailored, through 30 credit hours of coursework, to help educators meet the requirements to become an elementary or secondary school principal, as well as other administrative-level positions.

"I chose Evangel because it was the perfect blend of helping me in my current position as a classroom teacher and preparing me for my future goals in administration," Yocum said. "Evangel prioritizes the fact that our careers is an outpouring of our relationship with the Lord and our work in education is our full-time calling to ministry."

A native of Overland Park, Kansas, Yocum is focused on being a positive influence in her classroom. "Evangel equipped me to be a better leader in my school and taught me that my calling as a leader in education is my greatest work."
